IDENTIFYING A PARTNERSHIP OPPORTUNITY

- Real estate professional with limited financial management experience
- Property manager that is receiving repeated complaints from clients
- Financial and accounting data that is housed in various data sources that are not interconnected
- Real estate professional complaining that they need to 'upgrade' their current version of QuickBooks
- Inconsistencies in industry specific reports such as rent rolls, tenant information and transaction history.

CHALLENGE

In October 2010, Dave Bright, a Certified Public Accountant ("CPA") with Alan Edward CPA in Glenview, IL, received a referral for a prospective property management client. XYZ Property Management<sup>1</sup> was receiving a significant amount of complains from clients regarding their property managements reports. XYZ Property Management was utilizing QuickBooks for their bookkeeping, but they were encountering considerable challenges. XYZ Property Management's data file was in disarray; transactions were being entered incorrectly, which caused inconsistencies in property tenant information. The architecture was not customized to XYZ Property Management's needs, which caused confusion when entering data into the system and significant reporting challenges. Dave immediately recognized the opportunity to customize XYZ Property Management's accounting system to eliminate the architecture, template and reporting problems. While Dave was able to identify the problems, solving them might be complicated. This was his first property management client, and Dave's knowledge of accounting practices for property managers was limited. Fixing XYZ Property Management's accounting issues would require a complete architecture overhaul and the development of dozens of specialized property management set up, templates and reports.

SOLVING THE PROBLEM

Dave and Gita started working together in November 2010. They decided that the best way to approach this project was for Gita to consult to Dave and Dave work directly with his client. XYZ Property Management was already utilizing QuickBooks® but Dave suggested upgrading to QuickBooks® Enterprise Edition, which allows for more sophisticated reporting capabilities. Dave and Gita's goal was to streamline XYZ Property Management's accounting system so they could run all of their customized property management reports at the touch of a button. Gita provided the templates for the new reports then worked with Dave to determine what additional customization was required. Once completed, Dave relied heavily on Gita for coaching regarding how to streamline the process, procedures and workflow in his client's office given the set up, template and reporting enhancements. Throughout the process, Gita provided Dave with invaluable insight and expertise regarding best practices, critical question to ask his client and guidance on how to best present the system upgrades upon completion.

Dave and Gita's four-month project concluded in March 2011. Dave found the partnership with Gita invaluable. With Gita's help, Dave experienced greater than 80% time reduction in converting the tenants from their prior system to their new fully customized QuickBooks® financial management system. The benefit to Dave was twofold; Dave was able to satisfy XYZ Property Management's accounting needs while gaining valuable experience he can use for future property management clients. XYZ Property Management's clients enthusiastically thanked them for creating "a simplified reporting system that we can finally understand". The new architecture, template and reports significantly decreased overhead and labor costs and dramatically increased XYZ Property Management's accounting accuracy.
